Local historians reconnect Christian Daniels with descendant

Editor's Note: This is a follow-up on a story we did on the discovery of a Civil War-era headstone in Johnson City. If you missed it, it can be found at www. jcnewsandneighbor.com.

When Dawn Peters and Teresa Mann Treadway saw a story in the Sept. 2 edition of the News & Neighbor on the discovery of a mysterious headstone, it piqued their collective interest.

"We both love a challenge to find historical and genealogical information about subjects such as this," Peters said in an email to the News & Neighbor following the publication of the story.

Little was known about Christian Daniels, a Union Soldier whose name was inscribed on a slab of marble that Eric Ward discovered in a South Johnson City home he had recently purchased. Through the help of local military historian Allen Jackson, Ward and his friend Rick Lewis learned that Daniels had died of an illness, which was common during the Civil War. Jackson's research helped uncover the plot where Daniels was buried as well as a purchase order from Nov. 29, 1879 for the granite stone and other pertinent information.

But from there, the trail went cold. No family came forward to request the remains be exhumed and moved prior to the flooding of the cemetery when Watauga Lake was formed by the TVA in 1948. At some point before the land was flooded or during a brief drawdown of the lake in 1983, the stone was moved from its original location, leaving Daniels to rest beneath the water in an unmarked grave. Ward and Lewis turned the stone over to the proper authorities with many questions left unanswered.

Upon reading the story, Peters and Treadway

JCAHBA debuts Builders' Brand magazine, revamped Showcase of Homes

BY DAVE ONGIE, NEWS EDITOR

According to an old English proverb, "Necessity is the mother of invention."

That is certainly the case for Builders' Brand, a new publication from the Johnson City Area Home Builders Association. Will Crumley said an increase in the volume of phone calls to the JCAHBA, the Chamber of Commerce and the individual members of the JCAHBA seeking recommendations on reliable professionals to complete a litany of home-related construction and renovation projects led to the creation of Builders' Brand magazine. In the past, the JCAHBA has done a print product that has traditionally served as a companion to the association's Showcase of Homes event. This year, the decision was made to retool the magazine to serve as a one-stop shop for folks looking for reputable professionals to complete home-related projects. and home construction.

"We said, 'What if we took that magazine and made it not just for this Showcase of Homes, but made it a guidebook for people interested in building a new home, remodeling their home or looking for a place to build a home - a community or development," Crumley said. "It's supposed to be a guidebook that provides a resource for people to find somebody to do that work, somebody reputable."

In much the same way, the Showcase of Homes has also changed form this year out of necessity. Obviously the COVID-19 pandemic altered the traditional format of the showcase, but a booming housing market also played a

"We're not even promoting it as the Showcase because builders were so busy and selling houses so quickly that we had trouble getting enough houses lined up to do a traditional Showcase of Homes," Crumley said. "Throw COVID in the mix, and all of a sudden, we were only looking at having a few houses."

Instead, the Showcase is taking on more of an openhouse format with two custom houses featured. The two homes will be open to the public with contractors on hand to answer questions about the houses.

"It should be fun and give folks a glimpse into the latest housing trends and what's on the market and what could be built for you," Crumley said. "It should be a neat experience."

The event will take place from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. on Oct. 25. The addresses of the two homes and other up-to-date information can be found at www.jcahba.org. Preregistration is not necessary, but Crumley said those who do attend will need to take the necessary precautions to avoid the spread of COVID-19.

"They'll definitely need to abide by the rules established by the governor, the county mayor and the city as far as COVID protection," Crumley said.

The JCAHBA is launching a Builders' Brand publication to help connect local folks with dependable experts in the housing field.

Main Street Jonesborough awards grant money to small businesses

Main Street Jonesborough and the Jonesborough Area Merchants & Service Association (JAMSA) recently awarded over $10,000 to local small businesses as part of Jonesborough's Small Business Recovery fund.

The recovery fund was created in an effort to help with the devastating economic impacts that the coronavirus pandemic has had on local businesses within Jonesborough's community. Soon after COVID-19 hit, the Town of Jonesborough began coming up with ways to provide help for the small businesses that make downtown so special.

"Seeing how our small businesses responded to COVID-19 through creativity and innovation has been inspirational. Their resilience sparked our minds and motivated us to explore additional avenues of additional support. That's when Main Street Jonesborough and JAMSA created the Small Business Recovery Fund," said Cameo Waters, Main Street and Tourism Director.

Main Street Jonesborough and JAMSA banded together in an effort to provide assistance to small businesses that might have been struggling from the effects of the pandemic.

"JAMSA and Main Street Jonesborough started the Small Business Recovery Fund to allow individuals and other businesses in the community to give monetary assistance to Jonesborough businesses who needed additional help to get through the crisis" explains Jennifer Wolfe, JAMSA Treasurer. "During the COVID shutdowns, JAMSA's goal was to help Jonesborough's small businesses withstand the challenge."

The recovery fund aimed to help businesses who employee 20 or fewer full-time employees. Each application was carefully reviewed by an allocation committee to ensure each grantee met the program criteria. After consideration, Main Street Jonesborough and JAMSA were happy to announce that each small business who applied for the grant received an allocation from the fund.

"Our small businesses are truly the heartbeat of Jonesborough and we want to see them to continue to thrive" said Waters. The mini-grants are intended to be put to a variety of uses including general operating costs, employee payroll, marketing, product, research, and training. Crockett's Hopkins named TSTA Educator of the Year

Washington County Schools is excited to announce that Dr. Mary Beth Hopkins, a chemistry teacher at David Crockett High School, has been selected as the Tennessee Science Teachers Association (TSTA) Educator of the Year for grades 9-12.

One of the goals of the TSTA is to recognize outstanding science teaching throughout the state. TSTA asks schools systems to nominate teachers who have established a leadership role in promoting science as an essential component of basic education in the state of Tennessee. Dr. Hopkins was nominated by Washington County Schools for her outstanding teaching and leadership at David Crockett High School.

Dr. Hopkins has dedicated the last thirteen years of her career to improving the accessibility of science education through inquiry-based lessons focused on observation and prediction. She creates projects where students through collaborative grouping research topics of interest, develop their own experiments, and interpret their results.

Dr. Hopkins stated, "Science must be accessible to all so that all can see the importance and validity of science in their lives regardless of education level or choice of vocation... If we are going to restore trust in science by society, students must be able to see that science has logic and validity when performed properly and recognize what makes studies invalid."

Williams announces commission bid

Local physician Dr. Turney Williams said he has the right preparation to keep Johnson City on the right track during a recent campaign launch event streamed live on Facebook.

"What's right about Johnson City," Williams said, "is what's right about America. Johnson City is on the right track, and I'm running to keep it that way."

Williams, who completed his fellowship in anesthesiology at the Mayo Clinic, founded Pain Medicine Associates in 2000, which now has 55 employees. His calling to medicine has also spurred his involvement in public policy. Williams serves on the Legislative Committee of the Tennessee Medical Association and has helped close half of the "pill mills" in Tennessee as part of the state's Controlled Substances Prescribing Committee.

Williams' platform includes paying police more and being better prepared for future pandemics.

"This race shouldn't be about political parties," Williams said, "but it does matter who governs because ideas have consequences. "Johnson City is a right minded community," Williams concluded, "and in this election, we need to double down on the principles that founded and sustain this nation and reject the radicalism that has failed so badly in big cities."

Williams is one of eight candidates running for three seats on the Nov. 3 ballot. Early voting starts Oct. 14.

TRI requests funding to build-to-suit potential Aerospace Park tenants

BY SCOTT ROBERTSON

Tri-Cities Airport (TRI) Executive Director Gene Cossey took the occasion of a Tuesday morning Legislator's Breakfast to make it known that the airport will likely be able to bring tenants to Aerospace Park sooner if it has funds on-hand so it can offer to erect a building as an incentive.

"This is by no means to negate all the money and all the work that was put into making this facility in the state it is now. Taking what was basically rolling mountainous terrain and making it flat ground is phenomenal. The amount of work and the amount of money that you need to make that happen is tremendous," Cossey said. "Ideally, what we would find is a business or a company that has plenty of money for capital investment to come in here and say they're going to build a facility and start operations as soon as the building is built.

"We run into a lot of companies though, that have a good amount of money and have a good business and do a lot of work but they don't want to put their capital into a building. They want to find a place that has a building built they can just start leasing," Cossey said.

The airport would rather have funding on-hand to quickly build a tenant a facility to its specifications rather than plow money into a spec building and hope they've built the right size facility, said Mark Canty, director of Business Development for the TRI. "We want to leave as many options open as possible."

Construction of the park is nearing completion, with an April 2021 full completion date planned. The $18.5 million project was funded using local, regional, state and federal sources.

Three members of the northeast Tennessee state legislative delegation attended the meeting, as did both major party candidates to replace the retiring Congressman Phil Roe.

Gov. Lee announces $50 million in new business relief funding

Tennessee Governor Bill Lee and the Financial Stimulus Accountability Group (FSAG) has announced an initial $50 million in federal Coronavirus Relief Funds for the new Supplemental Employer Recovery Grant (SERG) program to provide additional relief to small businesses suffering during the COVID-19 pandemic.

This new wave of funding includes specific support for minority-owned, women-owned and veteran-owned businesses, as well as businesses owned by disabled persons.

"Small businesses are the backbone of our economy and supporting them through these difficult times has been one of the core missions of the Financial Stimulus Accountability Group," said Gov. Lee. "The SERG program will provide further relief to small businesses, especially those who may not have been able to access previous federal and state relief funds."

"The coronavirus has placed an inordinate burden on our small business owners. These businesses are critical economic drivers and the most vulnerable during times of crisis," said Lieutenant Governor Randy McNally (R-Oak Ridge). "I was grateful for the opportunity to work with my colleagues on the Financial Stimulus Accountability Group to provide this relief to businesses

"We have stood with our businesses by initiating the Small Business Relief Program, and stabilizing the Unemployment Trust Fund, and today's announcement is yet another targeted solution to strengthen the Tennessee business community's ongoing recovery efforts," said House Speaker Cameron Sexton (R-Crossville). "All of these programs support our minority, women, disabled and service-disabled veteran business owners who are suffering during these extraordinary times. We need them to remain open and to thrive, and I applaud our Stimulus Accountability Group for helping all Tennessee businesses get back up on their feet so they remain successful.

Small business owners and non-profit organizations can apply to receive reimbursement for eligible direct expenses or costs incurred as a result of business interruption due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

The program's application window opened Oct. 7 and will remain open until Dec. 29, 2020, or until all funds are depleted. Please note:

- Funds will be distributed on a first-come, first-served
- Awards are capped at $30,000. Businesses located in low to moderate income ("LMI") census tracts, Opportunity zones, or Promise zones will receive an additional $500 added to the maximum allowable expenses:
- 10% of all funds distributed under this program will be reserved for eligible diversity business enterprises, classified as minority business enterprises, women business enterprises, or service-disabled veteran business enterprises, and enterprises owned by disabled persons.

The period for reimbursable expenses is May 1, 2020 through August 31, 2020. Eligible expenses and business interruption costs include but are not limited to:

- Costs to create social distancing measures
- Purchasing personal protective equipment for employees or customers
- Contactless equipment
- Payroll expenses

Lower Higgins Creek Falls/Bearwallow Hollow (Unicoi County, TN)

GETTING THERE: Travel east/south on Interstate 26 through Erwin. Take Exit 43 and proceed to the old Asheville Highway (19W), which runs parallel to the interstate. Turn right (south) and then turn right again in 3/4 mile onto Lower Higgins Creek Road. Take the road about 1.5 miles to its absolute dead end. Parking there does not constitute trespassing. DISTANCE: 2 miles (out and back to falls – further fun awaits upstream)

HOW STRENUOUS: Easymoderate PARKING: Parking is limited at the dead end. SPECIAL CONSIDERATIONS: Trail is not blazed but is easy to follow

For hikers prepared to take a short, steep side trip that may involve use of their hands and some getting dirty, the short excursion to Lower awe-inspiring reward. Even if viewed from the main trail, the falls are impressive as the leaves thin, and the relatively short trek to them offers plenty of peaceful beauty.

Just one drainage north of Tennessee's newest state park, Rocky Fork, Lower Higgins boasts many of the same features that led to Rocky Fork's preservation. These include impressive second-growth forest with lots of hardwoods; steep slopes that rise more than 1,000 feet above the creek and hem its valley in; and abundant rhododendron. ferns and other flora that thrive in the moist environment fed by branch after branch tumbling down the slopes and into the creek.

It all makes for a rugged environment, yet one that even inexperienced trekkers can enjoy. Hikers will find themselves on a double tracked path that usually guarantees solitude. In the first halfmile, signs of the creek's popularity with fishermen greet the eye as the trail passes makeshift camps. The creek is often visible as it splashes over rocks and boulders. Then the trail ascends more steeply above the narrowing walls that create a perfect setting for whitewater, cataracts and the main fall itself.

Hikers should hear the falls after nearly a halfmile of more rigorous climbing. Dogs or kids are likely to keep one motivated, and the elevation gain is roughly 600 feet to the falls. Rest a bit, gird your loins and scramble down (carefully) to the creek for a peaceful respite in the cool of the spray.

This hike can continue upstream. Several more falls, smaller than the main one, await, and the drainage broadens in an area known as Bearwallow Hollow. If you have the stamina and the desire – and are up for a creek crossing or two – this is a great way to extend the hike for several more miles up toward Higgins Creek's headwaters. Come this far and the colors of fall will spread in all directions.

THE PAYOFF(S):

Solitude. A sense of accomplishment. Selfies at a waterfall that the vast majority of Tri-Citians will never see in person.

Next week's edition of the News & Neighbor will feature the third hike in this five-part series.

Niswonger Children's Hospital is asking the public to help donate items that will be given to patients during an upcoming Halloween celebration, which has been modified this year due to COVID-19.

Ballad invites public to support virtual Spooky Trail event

Due to COVID-19 and increased safety precautions, Niswonger Children's Hospital will not be holding its annual Spooky Trail event in the hospital. However, the plan is to hold this event virtually and give our community an opportunity to participate.

For the virtual event, we are asking community members to create a basket to be handed out to patients at Niswonger Children's Hospital the week of Halloween. Baskets will also be distributed at affiliated pediatric departments.

The Child Life Department has suggested that baskets be organized by gender, based on age groups. You may choose to make a basket for infants, toddlers, elementary school ages, adolescents or teens. All items must be new and in their original packaging. No homemade goodies, please. Candy in original packaging is allowed, but we ask that you donate a minimal amount of candy if you choose to do so. Some patients may be on dietary restrictions.

We encourage you, your community organization, classroom or family to dress up in a themed costume and take a photo to submit with your basket so patients may still enjoy seeing people dressed up! Please print and attach your photo to your basket. Personalized notes may be submitted with baskets as well. These photos may also be featured on social media. Please email Amanda.ward@balladhealth.org to arrange drop-off of your basket.

Every little boy was a Johnny.....once.

When I was 13 or so mom handed me a thick book to read, "Thoughts For Johnny."

She said it would explain some things about young boys growing up and how to deal with changes

editor@jcnewsandneighbor.com

awaiting us around the corner. Little did she know I already knew what the book would contain as my friends' older brothers readily shared their knowledge with their little brothers and their friends.

I was in the know and laughed at the simplistic explanations the author was communicating. He never did get to the good stuff and I soon lost interest in the boring chatter.

Somehow my dad's generation neglected to share their knowledge of the 'Birds and Bees'. I made sure to explain those issues to my son, Jeff. I even drew some diagrams. His response to my explanations and artwork put him into hysterical laughter. He already knew too.

My dad was more interested in what I was doing in school and how my grades were coming along. Every sixweeks the dreaded day came for the report card. It must be signed by the parent to insure they were aware of the wonderful progress their child was making. And in some cases the lack of progress. I suspect in those days report cards bred a high level of forgery in America. I never had to stoop to that level as I was an A student throughout my educational experience.

However, I can relate to some of the "Little Johnny" episodes listed below. When needed I was able to develop a high level of bluffism when sharing my report card with mom and dad. And I'm sure there are teachers that can remember some of these exact situations. We were all "Little Johnny" at one time or another. Enjoy.

Teacher: "Johnny, your composition on 'My Dog' is exactly the same as your brother's. Did you copy his?" Little Johnny: "No, teacher, it's the same dog."

Teacher: "Now, Johnny, tell me frankly, do you say prayers before eating?"

Little Johnny: "No sir, I don't have to, my Mom is a good cook."

Dad: "How were the exam questions?" Little Johnny: "Easy."

Dad: "Then why do you look so unhappy?"

Little Johnny: "The questions didn't give me any trouble – just the answers."

Dad: "I hear you skipped school to play football?" Little Johnny: "No, I didn't – and I have the fish to prove it."

Dad: "I'm sorry you flunked your math test. How far were you from the right answer?" Little Johnny: "Three seats."

Dad: "Look at this report card - your teacher says she can't teach you anything!"

Little Johnny: "I told you she was no good."

Dad: "What did you learn today?" Little Johnny: "Not enough – I have to go back tomorrow."

Dad: "Would you mind explaining the meaning of this D and F on your report card?"

Little Johnny: "No problem, Dad. It stands for 'Doing Fine."

Dad: "Were you absent on the day of the Math test?" Little Johnny: "No – but the boy who sits next to me was."

English Teacher: "Do you know what an inkling is?"

Little Johnny: "It's a baby fountain pen."

English Teacher: "Johnny, use the word 'decide' in a sentence"

Little Johnny: "My Dad got a flat tire so he pulled over to decide of the road."

English Teacher: "Who can give me an example of a double negative?"
Little Johnny: "I don't know none."

History Teacher: "What are the three zones on the earth?"

Little Johnny: "Tropic, temperate, and tow-away."

History Teacher: "What did dinosaurs eat?" Little Johnny: "Looking at the ones in the museum, they didn't eat anything."

Little Johnny: "I don't think I deserve a zero on this test." Teacher: "Neither do I, but it's the lowest mark I can think of."

Teacher: "What's the definition of ignorance?" Little Johnny: "I don't know."

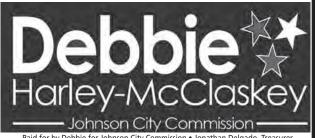

Teacher: "Johnny – your handwriting is terrible." Little Johnny: "That's OK – I'm going to be a Doctor."

Teacher: "Can you tell me what a myth is?" Little Johnny: "A female moth."

COVID-19 Protection; a Runaway Train!

When the COVID-19 train appeared, most Americans (myself included) were slow to realize that is was a Runaway Train and that we need to jump off the tracks and dive behind protective barriers.

Our barriers against COVID-19 include face masks, physical distancing, hand-washing, and avoidance of crowds, all of which decrease our chances of contact with the deadly virus particles riding on droplets of spit suspended in the air.

Accordingly, when we are away from home and among other people, we need to wear face masks covering our noses and mouths, maintain a distance of six feet from the nearest person (to the extent that we are able to do so in our work), stay away from large gatherings of people (especially in-doors), wash our hands frequently, and remain vigilant.

- both members of the Watauga Historical Association - rolled up their sleeves and got busy trying to find out everything they could about Christian Daniels. A trail of documents led them to the first of many interesting discoveries. Daniels was traveling with the 10th Ohio Battery, the unit inscribed on his headstone, but he was actually from Indiana.

A U.S. Census form from 1860 included Daniels' signature and indicated that he had emigrated from Germany and made his living in America as a shoemaker. According to the document, Daniels lived in Polk County along with his wife Madeline and his 13-year-old son Frederick.

A widow's pension application filled out by Madeline following Christian's death revealed more details about his military service and his death. Daniels married Madeline on May 24, 1861 and enlisted in the Union Army three weeks later as a volunteer with Wilder's Battery out of Indiana. Daniels was a private in the light artillery unit, but at some point he hooked up with the 10th Ohio Battery that was listed on his tombstone.

Daniels' cause of death in the pension paperwork was listed as "Congestion of the Brain," a condition that was deemed to have been contracted in the line of duty, and thus entitling Madeline to a widow's pension of $8 per month.

"It is our wish that he be honored on the site where he fought."

- Kathy Jensen

The identity of the person who purchased the headstone Ward found remains a mystery, and the documents gathered can only tell us so much about the life of a man who died 145 years ago. As it turned out, following the path of Frederick Daniels was the key to discovering a living descendent of Christian Daniels.

Peters was able to get in touch with Kathy Jensen, a descendent of Daniels who lives in Idaho, and Jensen was able to pass along some family history that shed more light on Daniels' life. According to a passenger list, Christian Daniels brought his 4-yearold son Frederick over to the United States from Germany in 1851.

"It is our suspicion that Christian's wife, Frederick's mother, died and he then brought his son to America," Jensen said via email.

Once Christian enlisted in the military, it didn't take long for Frederick to follow in his father's footsteps. According to the oral family history, Frederick did not get along with his stepmother and enlisted in the Union Army at 16 years old about a year after his father left Indiana.

After being captured by Confederate soldiers, Frederick spent the rest of the war in a series of prison camps, ending with a stint in Andersonville, Georgia, according to information Jensen found in a family Bible. Following the war, Fredrick returned home as an 18-year-old veteran who was very ill after his time in the prison camps with no knowledge of his father's fate.

"He never had contact or knew what happened to his father, Christian, after he went off to war according to the family story," Jensen said. "As he was so very young when he came to America, our suspicion is that he didn't know anything much about his biological mother either. No information was passed on to his children."

Jensen believes

Frederick got married and re-married within a year after returning from the war. His second marriage yielded a pair of daughters — Sarah and Mirilla — who both married young after Frederick died in a mining accident at the age of 40. Sarah went on to have 10 children, and Jensen is among her descendants.

When Jensen received word that her ancestor's headstone had turned up in Tennessee, she said she was inspired to dig deeper into the family history and discover more about Christian's 10 years in America prior to his death. The soldier laid to rest so far from home is forgotten no more.

Jensen was also hopeful Christian's headstone would find a fitting home among others who fought so bravely in defense of their country.

School board candidates respond to Chamber survey

The Chamber of Commerce serving Johnson City, Washington County and Jonesborough, with input from its Governmental Relations Council, recently surveyed the candidates seeking seats on the Johnson City School Board.

The Chamber is pleased to present the results of the survey and trusts you will rely on these responses as you determine who should represent us on the Johnson City School Board. Early voting begins Oct. 14 and ends Oct. 29 with Election Day set for Nov. 3. Please vote and exercise this freedom. The Chamber wishes to thank the candidates for their willingness to run and serve.

Candidates: Ginger Carter; Kenneth Herb Greenlee; Jonathan Kinnick; David Linville; Beth Simpson; Paula Treece; Matt Wilhjelm Candidates were asked to limit their answers to 50 words or less.

1. What are your three main reasons for seeking a seat on the School Board and what distinguishes you from the other candidates?

Carter: 1. Provide quality education for all 2. Improve safety measures on school campuses. 3. Ensure that all processes are as efficient as possible. Education has always been a part of my life and continues to be as a mother and an associate professor at ETSU College of Medicine.

Greenlee: a. Provide creative ways of using our finances b. Share in the construction of continued educational plans during the panademic. c. Expand our school buildings and classrooms where necessary Having 50 years of monitoring school children, 8 years within the truancy department. Presently, Carver Recreation Center Director, I feel very qualified to...

Kinnick: I analyze systems and find solutions for a living, and I'd like to continue doing this for our schools. I want to help teachers and students succeed by continuing to ensure they have the necessary resources. I have the skills/commitment to do the job. I'm the longest-serving incumbent running. www.VoteKinnick.org

Linville: I am passionate about education and believe strong representation on the school board is critical to the continued success of our school system. My experience as an educator and educational leader sets me apart. I seek to serve so we may continue to build on a foundation of Simpson: My candidacy is motivated by a desire to serve our community, to provide level-headed leadership, and to help JCS continue to expand its mission to enable all students to achieve excellence. My experience as a parent, volunteer, and as a former teacher helps distinguish my candidacy.

Treece: To ensure the students are educated to the highest standards.; Educating our students is ensuring our future.; Making our community better I have worked advocating for students at the local and state level through my 15 years of PTA leadership in our schools.

Wilhjelm: Thankfully, we have a talented field of school board candidates. As a businessperson with 15 years of senior financial leadership, I bring to the board a background in strategic thinking, decision making, and the ability to hear all sides of complex issues to set policy. At my core, I am...

2. Do you feel all students are receiving an optimal education in our system? If not, what needs to change?

Carter: I do feel like Johnson City has a fantastic public school system. I always think improvements could be made and want to help facilitate positive changes for both students and teachers. Education is always evolving. We need to be ready to make appropriate adjustments and changes to optimize our education.

Greenlee: Yes, I feel that our children are currently receiving an optimal education however, the duty of the board is to always work toward ways and means of continual optimal educational improvements that allow each student a chance to succeed.

Kinnick: Yes, they are. Our administrators and teachers are always looking for potential improvements for educating our students. This pandemic has shown our resilience, creativeness, and expertise in unprecedented times, as we continue to strive to offer the best education possible.

Linville: The mission of our school system is "to enable all students to achieve excellence in learning, social responsibility, and self-worth." I worry especially in these challenging times certain students are at greater risk for not achieving their fullest potential. We must continually address roadblocks to ensure all students' success.

Simpson: JCS works hard to meet the difficult objective of enabling all students to achieve excellence. Regardless of effort, some students will have unmet needs. Creating opportunities for self-assessment and increasing avenues for communication from the community can ensure that opportunities are expanded and improved for all students.

Treece: No. I believe education starts at home. The importance of education needs to be stressed from a very early age both at home and in our schools. We need to work towards finding the best way to educate each student which is its own challenge.

Wilhjelm: As a community, we should all be proud the Johnson City School System ranks as one of the tops in the state. That is a testament to the work of our teachers, staff, administrators, and the Board. That said, I do not believe there is an educator in the system...

3. What do you feel should be the school board's role during post-pandemic recovery? (i.e. virtual education be incorporated into curriculum, plans for future disruption

Carter: The Johnson City Board of Education needs to get things back to "normal" as soon as we can. Education at this level is not ideal in the virtual setting. Our children need socialization and interaction to properly develop. They need to physically be in a classroom with teachers and friends.

Greenlee: The Board should work toward the safety of the staff, teachers, and the students. Virtual education should be incorporated into the curriculum with the necessary equipment needed in place to be sure that each student can be properly taught. The School Board should prepare ahead for pandemics or other disruptions.

Kinnick: We are already planning to offer remote (inhome) learning as a permanent option for our students going forward, as some students may need that for reasons besides a pandemic. This pandemic has given us a template for disruptions in general, and then we would fine-tune it to a specific circumstance.

Linville: The school board's role is to ensure the system has the necessary resources to fulfill its mission. As we move through the pandemic, realizing we are not yet near a post-pandemic recovery, providing exceptional remote education is critical. This requires ongoing commitment to technology resources and professional development.

Simpson: The board's role in the coming years will be critical. With yet unknown social and economic ramifications, the board must make level-headed fiscal and educational decisions. This should include wise allocation of funds, appropriate use of virtual education, and sensible contingency plans.

Treece: Our ultimate goal is to have every student back in school full time. The best education is in-person education, but we need to incorporate virtual learning for those students who have medical issues. We had systems in place before the pandemic for that type of learning and need to continue.

Wilhjelm: Valuing "Kids First", the Board's role is to create learning opportunities for students - regardless of circumstances. How we educate our children today looks different than it ever has before. We need to listen to the desires of the community, heed expert health guidance, and with that framework create the...

4. How can the school system better prepare students to meet the needs of our area employers?

Carter: I think engaging local businesses in more co-op programs would be great. I think it is difficult for a teenager to know what he/she wants to do with the rest of their life. More exposure to local business opportunities would better equip our children to plan for their future.

Greenlee: The School System should allow businesses to plan Job Fairs, and Job Shadowing events, to display the types of programs available to those students who will decide what field of employment they are interested in.

Kinnick: Employers need individuals who can work with a team, use creativity and critical thinking to do problem solving, and have good oral and written communication skills. These skills need to be taught in both college-oriented and vocational classes, along with how to apply them in the real world.

Chocolate Toxicity/

Linville: Nearly two thirds of individuals will require some type of credential, certificate, or degree after high school to meet the needs of employers. Our school system must remain positioned to provide students with skills not only for entry work after high school but also for continuing their education. Simpson: Our region's success is dependent on JCS preparing students to be college-and-career ready. Continued support for vocational education and continued improvement to the curriculum that promotes critical thinking skills across all disciplines is vital.

Treece: Students are best prepared when they have been given the tools for a good solid education. We need to have paths for both vocational/technical and academic pursuits as local employers need both types of workers to function effectively.

Wilhjelm: Preparing children to become openminded, well-functioning adults who are ready for the workforce is primary to our educational priorities. The economy of today and tomorrow rewards life-long learners. Furthermore, when the children who are entering school today graduate college, they will be competing for jobs not against folks from upper-east...

5. Please identify measures that could enhance the education of the students in the Johnson City School System that would not materially increase the cost of educating them?

Carter: In any endeavor, I think budget reviews are crucial to success. Ensuring that services provided are effective and not duplicated may open new opportunities for success without requiring any extra money. Appropriately distributing dollars already in the budget costs nothing more than time.

Greenlee: It is possible to provide the school system with updated changes using the same dollars that they are spending now, making sure that those dollars are spent on relevant materials that will address the ever changing society that we are living in. We should be ready to supply necessary materials.

Kinnick: Partnerships with area employers and with area colleges could do this. The more exposure students have to classes and experiences related to their interests, the more interested they will be, and the more likely they will be to pick a college or vocational path that they enjoy and excel in.

Linville: Enhancing student education is not just a one and done project. It is a continuous improvement process that is integral to operating schools and student success. The focus should be on closing the gap between high performing and low performing students, an approach that doesn't have to add cost.

Simpson: Dollars spent do not always equal educational enhancement. Leveraging community partnerships with government, industry, higher education, and non-profits to promote academic goals is one way to expand our educational reach. Further promotion of the JCS Education Foundation can raise funds and our school's profile in the community.

Treece: Mentoring by having our local businesses and business leaders work with students at all levels and showing them what it takes to succeed in our city as adults. Sometimes just one individual can do amazing things in changing the life of a child.

Wilhjelm: When you are young, connecting how schoolwork translates to your future-self can be a difficult thing to do. I am the benefit of role models and mentors. I

Ginger Carter

Herb Greenlee

Matt Wilhjelm Beth Simpson support the idea of engaging the community to bring realworld experience into the classroom to support the work of our teachers.

6. Do you favor curriculum changes at any level of the school system?

Carter: I favor a review of the curriculum on an annual basis. Education is not stagnant. New research and facts are continually discovered. We must continue to keep our educational system and processes current with the times. No one can expect to use the same curriculum

Greenlee: Curriculum changes at any level should be discussed and reevaluated by the board and changes should be made whenever needed and conveyed to other necessary administrative boards, and to the citizens of the Kinnick: Curriculum changes are not something to do for the sake of doing, but need to be driven by state requirements, data, college requirements, employer requirements, etc. We make curriculum changes when

Linville: I support curriculum changes that serve to improve the educational outcomes of all students and advance the school system's reputation as one of the top

Simpson: Curriculum standards should be under routine review. Teachers, administrators, and school boards should cooperate with state officials to analyze, review, and revise curriculum to meet the changing needs

Treece: Yes, we should always be looking for the best curriculum to teach our students and evolving it as we see

Wilhjelm: I still have much to learn about our requirements. That said, to expand on my earlier point, I would support basic life-skills training, particularly in the area of personal finance at the high school level. I believe

7. Please identify any aspects of federal or state laws that you consider to be an impediment to operating the

Carter: If the Board becomes aware of any federal or state law that is an impediment to operating our school

Greenlee: I am concerned how truancy is viewed. I want to make sure that our youth are in school and getting the education that is needed without having so

Kinnick: The law that appears to allow the County to collect property taxes from the City, but then not share millions of those dollars with the City when the County uses cash to build new county schools is quite the Linville: Certainly, regulations can often add additional, seemingly trivial challenges for our system. More importantly however, I believe unforeseen challenges, for example when Washington County opted for a different approach to fund a new school, are the more worrisome concerns we have to be ready to address.

Simpson: Despite federal and state laws which may hinder or complicate JCS ability to meet community needs, JCS has risen to the challenge of educating all students. However, state tax codes hinder equitable allocations of tax dollars between the city and county creating an impediment to the operations of JCS.

Treece: Fully funding the Basic Education Plan (BEP) by our state government. Currently Tennessee ranks 46 out of 50 in education funding. Our state government hands down unfunded mandates to our school systems and expects that we will be able to fund anything they legislate without first giving us adequate backing.

Wilhjelm: Much has been made about the school voucher system for the State of Tennessee. Because of the great work to date in Johnson City, I believe a voucher program would contradict its intended purpose, and I would adamantly oppose the expansion of the program to our system.

8. Please identify areas of current Board of Education and/or Administration policy that you think should be

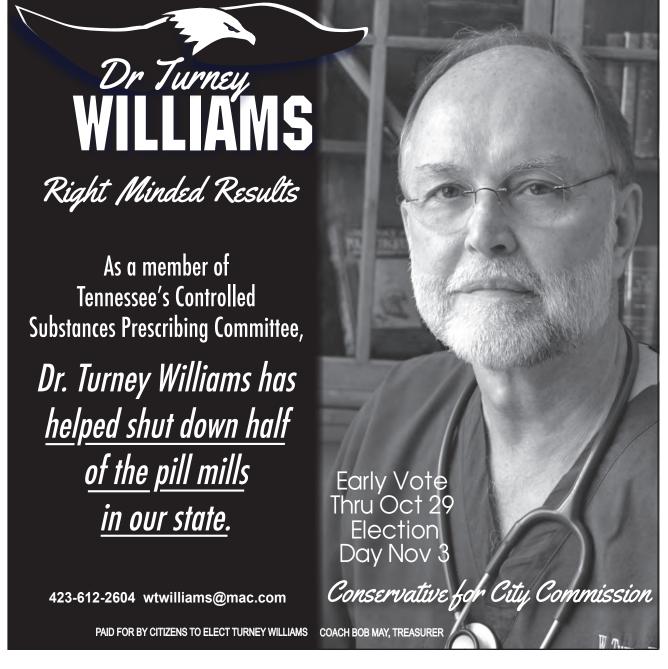

Carter: Our schools should not operate like a public park during school hours. There should never be any person on a school campus while in session that cannot be identified. Safety measures need to be tightened on all our school campuses. In addition, schools should never be used as election sites.

Greenlee: All policies should be reviewed, addressed, and reevaluated by the current board and Administration with changes made when and wherever necessary.

Kinnick: Policies are typically reviewed on a rotating schedule and updated at that time or on an as-needed basis. While there is always room for improvement, I do not believe we currently have any areas necessitating significant changes.

Linville: I am not aware of specific policies that currently are problematic. However as with all policies, the board must continue to regularly review and if necessary approve updates as part of the school system's continuous improvement process.

Simpson: I am in favor of a board and administration who are always assessing and evaluating policy to make sure it aligns with the JCS mission and executes fair and equitably to its constituency.

Treece: I don't think that there are any policy areas that need to be changed currently. We review all policies every year. The Policy Committee reviews all policies and the recommends changes to the full board and we vote on the changes twice a year.

Wilhjelm: By and large, we have a sound Board and Administration and the results bare it out. Our role on the Board at this time is not to create mass change, but to support and enhance a successful Administration.

9. The School Board is responsible for overseeing the work of the Director of the Johnson City Schools. Please describe your expectations of his performance and his relationship with the Board?

Carter: The School Board should expect our Director of Schools to have high moral standards. He/She must make hard decisions- even when the right choice is not the popular choice. The Director must strive to develop good relationships with faculty, staff, and our entire community.

Greenlee: My expectation is that the director continues to put the student first and seek out relevant educational materials to keep our youth competitive with todays job market.

Kinnick: Our expectations are high, and Dr. Barnett continues to meet those high expectations in all areas. He has a great relationship with the board, both individually and collectively, and he is available, responsive, informative, thorough, etc. when we need information and professional advice to make sound decisions.

Linville: The board's role in supervising the Director of Schools requires a deliberate partnership where the director and board must hold mutual expectations related to strategy, accountability, and support.

Simpson: The Superintendent and the board must have a harmonious working relationship with clear expectations of standards and performance objectives by which he or she is to be evaluated annually.

Treece: I do believe we have the best Director of Schools in the state of Tennessee. He is a great communicator and strives every day to make our schools better. The Board has high expectations of him and he exceeds those expectations.

Wilhjelm: "Expect the Best", the motto of our system, applies to our students, our staff, and first and foremost, our administrators. As a professional school administrator, the Director of Schools should be held with the highest expectations. I believe, and this is supported at the State level, our Director of Schools...

10. What's your perspective on ensuring the safety of our students and teachers?

Carter: My perspective is that we need to do more to ensure the safety of students and teachers. Too many random people are found on school campuses while in session. Our schools should not function like a public park during school hours. This assumes an unnecessary risk for our schools.

Greenlee: All protective measures necessary should be used to protect teachers, students, and staff, in this pandemic world we now live in. Sanitation, hygiene, and other protective measures should be promoted to keep our teachers, students, and staff safe.a plan should be implemented to address this matter, Kinnick: It's good! We're currently in the process of making physical changes at a number of our school buildings to improve safety. Those were a result of our standing Safety Security Committee, which continually reviews matters related to school safety, and our staff has on-going training on safety issues also.

Linville: Providing a safe learning environment in our schools is undeniably one of the primary responsibilities of the system and the board. Safeguarding the safety of our students, teachers, and staff requires continuous reassessment and appropriate allocation of resources.

Simpson: Students and teachers who feel unsafe are unable to work to their best abilities. JCS must provide emotional, social, and physical safety. From ensuring schools have adequate counseling available to regulating school entrance procedures, the system must continually implement and improve research-based policies that ensure safety.

Treece: Our school district has done a phenomenal job over the last several years working on safety issues. We have worked with the Johnson City Police Department to put School Resource Officers in every school to help keep our students safe.

Wilhjelm: Our staff and educators are on the front line of safety of our students – and this is not limited to the on-campus safety of our students. The reality is, during the break from school, in an unheralded manner, our educators were checking on the well-being of students. As a City...

11. What will you do to continue the collaboration between the Chamber and the School

Carter: The key to the success of our schools is community involvement. I am happy to work with the Chamber as a member of the JCBOE to facilitate working relationships to benefit our students and our community. Collaborative projects involving the Chamber and our schools will strengthen our entire community.

Greenlee: Monthly or quarterly meetings should be held between the two board to discuss board issues and community involvement.

Kinnick: Chamber members have invaluable insight as to the skills and abilities our graduates ultimately need, as they are the eventual potential employers. The Chamber and their support of the Youth Leadership and Tennessee Scholars Program are important to our system. I look forward to continued involvement and collaboration.

Linville: The School Board plays a significant leadership role in our community through its relationship with the Chamber and other organizations. Understanding and partnering with the Chamber to address challenges and create opportunities in our business community helps the region grow and prosper.

Simpson: JCS benefits from the chamber's work in regionalism, economic growth, and workforce development. Continuing the friendly relationship between the school board and the Chamber by supporting their events and maintaining good communication is essential to the entire Appalachian Highlands.

Treece: Our community works better when we have a solid relationship between our leaders, our schools and our businesses. Working with the chamber to build our schools and our student leadership benefits everyone.

Wilhjelm: I believe as previously stated, there is not only room but a need for the business community engagement in our school system. Having deep relationships in the business community, particularly the Chamber, I am positioned to further connect the school system with our business leaders, who every day ask of...
